Marie Denis, Michele Spanghero

Curated by Martina Cavallarin.

An exhibition in partnership with Giovanardi

26.9 – 28.11.2020 ▶ Opening 26.9.2020 – 6 pm

The show merges together artworks and installations by French artist Marie Denis and Italian sound artist Michele Spanghero. The exhibition is the direct continuation of the residency at Giovanardi, where they employed high-performance machinery and materials to produce a new set of works. Denis' reinterpretation of the vegetable kingdom is juxtaposed and in dialogue with the visual and sound investigation of Spanghero.

BEATRICE BURATI ANDERSON

Bal Masqué.

A surprise event between art, music and performance. Curated by Danniell Rangel and Beatrice Burati Anderson.

8.9 – 21.12.2019 ▶ Opening 6.9.2020 – 7 pm

by invitation only

Under the title of “Bal Masqué” we do not only want to re-contextualize the actual theme of the mask (so substantial, both for the times we are living and for the Venetian tradition), we also want to put a spot on the vital and particular role of art during two of the biggest sanitary crisis of the modern times, the pandemics that hit the world in 1918-20 and in 2020. Please check the gallery website for more info.

IKONA GALLERY

Michele Bubacco, The Alphabet

Curated by Živa Kraus.

3.9 – 1.11.2020

The gap between the photography, from which Michele Bubacco begins to work, and the pictorial works created, is remarkable. The photographic image is nothing but an excuse to undertake the pictorial operation, and the artist feels a closeness of method to what Titian did in his paintings: sometimes the work of art can assume, during his evolutionary process, features strongly different from what seemed to be the initial idea, even upsetting the preconditions.

Beyond The Wall

Curated by Marta Blanchietti, Eleonora Da Col.

10.11 – 3.12.2020

Starting from the idea of a wall between past and present, a young group of artists interprets the destruction and reconstruction. The exhibition is curated on two levels. The first: what is destruction, what does it mean to reconstruct? The second one sees the artists engaging with the city. What would happen if Venice loses its soul? The artists try to answer by showing Venice's often forgotten life and vivid identity.

MARIGNANA ARTE

I dreamed a dream – Chapter 2

Maurizio Donzelli, Arthur Duff, Serena Fineschi,

Aldo Grazi, Silvia Infranco, Giulio Malinverni,

Maurizio Pellegrin, Quayola, Donatella Spaziani,

Marco Maria Zanin.

Curated by Domenico De Chirico.

Until 17.10.2020

I dreamed a dream is designed as the content of a certain dream, never revealed, in which various images alternate, like the fantastic reproduction that occurs in the awareness of the content of a tangible experience or the free elaboration of what might be the content of said experience.

Lorenzo Passi.

Forgiato nel ferro, soffiato nel vetro

With text by Jean Blanchaert.

5.9 – 14.11.2020 ▶ Opening 5.9.2020 – 5 pm

For Passi, glass is not simply a medium, but is the main subject of his research. The act of blowing is conceived as a flow of life-giving energy that flows from the artist's creator self to the piece he is making. This not only comes alive but becomes the bearer of a vital spark infused by the artist who in turn becomes a demiurge, a sort of creator of a real unexplored world.

MARINA BASTIANELLO GALLERY

Graziano Folata, DURA MADRE (suite)

18.9 – 23.10.2020 ▶ Opening 18.9.2020

The theorem of the exhibition focuses on metaphysical experience, the moment in which substance and form collide in a freckled but coherent image, paradoxical but possible. It is indeed evident to the eye, but subtracted from it along the secret of the archetype: the arcane primordial sign that brings sense back to the being and predisposes us to revelations. It is the consciousness of time that cancels and synchronizes object and subject to the space of the happening.

GALLERIA MICHELA RIZZO

Brian Eno – David Tremlett

6.9 – 21.11.2020 ▶ Private view 5.9.2020

Galleria Michela Rizzo is happy to announce an exhibition that, for the first time, will establish a dialogue between two British artists of international standing, namely Brian Eno and David Tremlett. Both artists have already collaborated with the Venetian gallery in the past, and it is thanks to these previous experiences that this extraordinary artistic union was born. The exhibition includes both works resulting from a close dialogue between the two artists and site-specific works with rooms dedicated to each one of them.

VICTORIA MIRO

Flora Yukhnovich

12.9 – 24.10.2020

An exhibition of new works and works on paper created during a two-month residency with the gallery in Venice by the London-based artist. During this time, Yukhnovich used the opportunity to engage more fully with Venetian culture and to focus on one of her key influences, Giovanni Battista Tiepolo, whose works including ceiling frescoes in the Ca' Rezzonico museum and the Chiesa Santa Maria della Visitazione she was able to study first-hand.

The Ideal Route

What you've got in your hands is a geologic map. It plots the craters of active volcanoes. They don't spew lava, but something equally fervent and bright. Out of them flow the present time and the time that will come. The contemporary art galleries are valves that channel the time in which we live and anticipate the one we'll live in soon, because their clocks are always fast. Otherwise Venice is a city full of chasms, trapdoors, and wells that make you plunge deep into the past. Don't you see them? They're everywhere. Behind every corner, there's a church; cross a bridge, there's another palazzo; further on a museum waits. These places invite you to cross their thresholds; you enter, and in a flash you're in another age. Even the names of a calle or a campielo, if read well, can tell you their story – fabulous, ferocious, or funny as it might be. But it too belongs to the past, it hypnotizes you like a time machine made of words.

The whole city is full of vortices that suck you into distant points, into the life that went on before us. Walking around Venice means being absorbed by centuries past, to be set down at different levels of temporal depth: Gothic, Renaissance, the 18th century... The generations that preceded us planted irresistible traps that still work perfectly. It's good to let yourself be caught. But in a city like this, perhaps more than any other, someone has to make the present flow, invent it and prefigure the future. The contemporary art galleries pursue this vital task: renewing time, ensuring the health of an organism that would otherwise be made of just legacy, monuments, solidified memories, and too often their crass sale as souvenirs and trinkets.

The contemporary art galleries give what's new and unpredictable, what hasn't yet been, a chance. They pursue it passionately and freely; they help it spring forth. This map invites you to discover the sources brimming over with the days to come. Try to follow it. Discover the unexpected.
